

Cops, residents stymied by the new sidewalk encampments

TL police summit fails to solve this growing problem

By Tom Carter

TENDERLOIN police are so frustrated with the new sidewalk encampments in the Tenderloin and the petty crimes and drug traffic they spawn that they called a summit meeting on Sept. 21 to ask TL residents for suggestions on how to lick the problem.

The residents turned out in force, but there wasn’t a hint of a solution.

“The purpose was to get service providers and others to help in that Golden Gate Avenue corridor,” Tenderloin Police Capt. Kathryn Brown said afterward. “I wanted their suggestions. But everyone was so focused on the police.

“It got people thinking, though, and we were on the same page when we left. With time, people will come up with ideas. I’d prefer they have the meeting, though. If the police are there, they become the focus.”

Moreover, the common conjecture is that the encampments will get worse before they subside. Escalating the problem, some residents venture, will be the Sept. 29 closing of the 24-hour McMillan Center at 49 Fell St., a drop-in center which handled shelter reservations, and the mayor’s recent efforts to move squatters out of Golden Gate Park.

Free holiday meals and food giveaways are expected to attract more people.

The encampment and blocked sidewalk problems have existed near Tenderloin Health, the drop-in and services center for street people, for years. I’ve seen it this way worse before when we left. With time, people will come up with ideas. I’d prefer they have the meeting, though. If the police are there, they become the focus.”

Tenants’ talents in the spotlight in show at SRO

By Tom Carter

It was fitting that Tina Knox sang the 1930s tune “San Francisco.” When she was down and out, the city gave her a nice place to live in a cozy, made-over SRO that has support services for residents.

Knox was the first to perform before 30 residents at the Empress Hotel’s first Open Mic night on Sept. 12 put on by the Eddy Street hotel’s Tenant Council. The crowded Community Room off the lobby seethed with warm feelings and anticipation. Taquitos, mini bagels, guacamole and chips and drinks, compliments of the management, made the rounds. And if everyone did- n’t feel loved, they felt awfully appreciated.

Knox said Jeanette MacDonald made the song famous in a movie by the same name that ended with the 1906 earthquake.

“I love San Francisco,” announced the big lady, then gave the song a hearty belt. It didn’t matter that she mixed up some lyrics. Everybody felt the vibe, and they showered her with applause.

Randy Wilson, who handled introductions and helped organize the session, explained before Knox sang that the evening would show that “whatever we go through in life, we still have our talents” to display. And the show sprung it out from behind the doors.

Open Mic night culled an outpouring of talent from the residents of the Empress Hotel.

The 90-room Empress is the SRO that Prince Charles visited last November. Renovated two years ago, it’s the flagship of the Department of Health’s Direct Access to Housing program for the homeless and destitute chronically ill. The residents, many dually diagnosed with addictions and mental problems, are surrounded with medical and support services.

The Prince of Wales spent more than an hour at the Empress, touring with his wife Camilla, the Duchess of Kent, and talking with residents. Impeccably mannered, the prince spoke individually with residents and inquired about addictions, kicking drug habits, sleeping outdoors and counseling.

The Empress was at the top of Prince Charles’ list because he has a deep interest in finding solutions to homelessness. It also had a Brit connection.

About six years ago, a West Cork group of investors threw in with Empress owner Vijay Patel and the partnership plunked down $2 million to renovate the neglected fleabagger. It had 58 rooms for tourists then and 30 for residential use. The Corkers wanted to attract Irish travelers like the Sheehan Hotel on Sutter did, and called it West Cork at one point. But after the job was done, the city ruled the tourist rooms had not been used in three years and that by law they, too, should become residential, agreeing with the point made by lawyer Randy Shaw who heads the Tenderloin Housing Clinic: The appeal was turned down and the West Cork group hosed out.

The Extra’s stories by Anne Marie Jordan in May and August of 2002 told the tale.

Now, the grassroots performers felt they were getting the royal treatment.

“Thanks for this,” said baritone Rob

TENDERLOIN KIDS
Once again they can test their courage in the haunt- ed house at 138 Jones St. on Hallow- een, from dusk until 9 p.m. this year. Elaine Zamora will wait outside as the Queen of Hearts, perhaps crossing an ax point to lop off heads. She will direct kids through the gruesome door- way into her former law office, waiting room that will be transformed into a cemetery- down a colorfully haloween laden with icky things hanging from the ceiling, and into the witch’s lair. There, a larger than life-size witch will be stirring a bubbling cauldron. If kids make the room, the sponsor. “I just enjoy Halloween candy. This is Zamora’s fourth haunted bubbling cauldron. 70% OF DRUG CRIME IN TL
The percent of the city’s drug-related crime occurs in the Tenderloin, according to Police Department figures. Presentation is in the hottest spot in town — police plot 176. Bound by Turk, Leavenworth, Ellis and Mason, it’s the heart of the TL where a con- centration of nonprofits serve the community. The DA’s Donors Choice, which connects teach- ers’ wish lists with philanthropy. “They just love the globes and, of course, rugs are a classroom luxury,” Packer said. Some teachers had made requests a year ago to Donors Choice. But a few weeks ago, he said, the organization’s Becky Johnson called to ask if the school wanted to be part of a media event with the Nielsen and a 49ers Foundation gift. If so Johnson said, submit a list. “Our teachers had less than 48 hours to get it together,” Packer said. “They (Donors Choice) wanted large things to show the play- ers carrying them.” The rugs worked great but the art supplies didn’t come in big boxes. On Sept. 27, the Examiner ran a setup picture of offen- sive lineman Eric Heitmann carrying a rug at one end while two smiling first- graders held up the other end.

not the only solution,” Brown said, “and we need long-term solutions and your suggestions.”

Ltar Marjinaus, district watch commander, said, “It’s not a home- less problem. When the cops are called to handle situations that are basically medical, such as sub- stance abuse, education and urin- nation. The problem is dealers supplying addicts. TL police are called several times to Golden Gate. In the Tenderloin Health, he said. People started there hang around and cause problems.

NO ANSWERS
“I would be great to come up with one or two ideas we can follow up on,” Brown said. But there was none. The first hour was spent grilling the police about what happens to people who are arrested, because they are right back on the street.

“We’ve been trying to protect DeMartillac school for years,” Minasian said. “We get calls in the morning and when the kids are out in the afternoon. There’s a 1,000-foot buffer zone, but it’s a minimal number of cases going to court. So it doesn’t serve us. Drug right up to one of the schools within 1,000 feet of a school carry greater penalties. Two streets, DeMartillac. Middle School is located at 175 Golden Gate, in the same block with Tenderloin Health.

The police get calls from the YMCA on the northwest corner of Leavenworth and Golden Gate about blocked sidewalks. Minasian said, but seldom calls about St. Anthony’s long meal lines along Golden Gate. They are well- policed by St. Anthony’s, he said, even though drug dealers will “swoop down on long lines.”

Another problem area is in the first block of Jones Street when people attend the Islamic mosque on Friday afternoons. They are inconvenienced by crowds blocking the sidewalk, he said.

“People are getting everything they need to subsist in the neigh- borhood and there’s no need for them to go somewhere to get it,” Minasian said. “We’ve got to come up with something. And we’re counting on you to come up with something.”

Brown: “No, we’re under- manned. The department has 14 fewer officers than in 2005. She has four officers on bicycles and you work on that.”

But it is rare that we can staff a foot beat during the day,” she said. Taking cops off cars “jeopardizes safety” because it lengthens response time to emer- gency calls. She said her ideal is “a foot beat on every block.” But the funding isn’t there.

The litany was a repeat of exchanges during the Sept. 12 Alliance for a Better TL meeting in St. Anthony’s TL police station. The featured speakers were Lt. Charlie Orkes of SFPD Field Operations, Supervisor Matt Mullin and a representative from a Daly’s office.

“We need more foot beats,” said Elaine Zamora, manager of the North of Market/Tenderloin Community Benefit District. “Can’t we take them from car patrols?”

“No,” Orkes said. “Car patrols are for pursuit and quick reaction. You can’t expect an officer to run and cover six to eight blocks.”

So much narcotics-related crime creates a catch-22, Brown said. It takes cops off the street.

“We send a patrol to Ellis and Jones and 10 minutes later they’re back in the house,” Brown said.

“How about policy changes?” he asked.

“No. Why don’t police make arrests on quality-of-life issues?” he asked.

“Because of the city’s hands- off, compassionate approach to the homeless problem,” she said.

What can drive drug dealers away is an obsessive question that cops put up every community meeting involving the police. At the Sept. 21 summit meeting, Sharon Woo of the DA’s office was the only one to offer some small encouragement. She said last November bail was raised to $25,000 for dealing to cut off the drug dealers, BART-commuting drug dealers to get out of jail in “three or four hours,” she said.

San Francisco has failed the Tenderloin!

I believe that:

• EVERY street should be safe for EVERY person at ANY time.

• Our streets are not toilets!

• Our streets should be clean and safe.

Resident of District 6, I want to add to the other points that:

• No street should be safe for anyone at any time.

Residents of District 6 deserve the same clean and safe streets as residents of Pacific Heights.

"Ideas not ideology"
Rucker, who said he came from Milwaukee 25 years ago, “It gets us out of our rooms.” In front of a 6-by-6-foot mandala wall hanging used this evening to cover a window, and while the ceiling fan spun above him, he sang the Johnny Mathis classic “Misty.”

“Okay, maybe that’s going too far.”

And if you don’t like an act, boo ‘em off the stage. Saunders confessed, “Okay, maybe I’m not funny, I’m lewd. Ter joke — with a tongue-in-groove punch line — he elicited guffaws and groans. After a lesbian carpenter joke — with a tongue-in-groove punch line — he confessed, “Okay, maybe I’m not funny, I’m lewd. And if you don’t like an act, boo ‘em off the stage. Okay, maybe that’s going too far.”

Saunders was joking. The idea was to get people to come together, to be fearless and emote, show a talent, read a poem, tell a joke, anything. And they had coalesced nicely, thanks in part to the efforts of Randy Wilson, the tenant representative. Before the show, Wilson knocked on the tenants’ doors to encourage each to participate.

Saunders reminded that not all the art was at the microphone. He referred to art work on a wall that was “very saleable.” Hanging up for the show were impressively controlled oil, chalk, color pencil and watercolor drawings and ceramic clay art from six hotel artists.

EMPEROR NORTON II
“I’m not a novice,” said Norton Kolomeyer, a capricious elderly man and a medical doctor who also calls himself Emperor Norton II. The reference is to the 19th century businessman Joshua Norton who ruled the city proclaiming himself Emperor 1 of North America and Protector of Mexico.

“I used to attend lots of poetry sessions in North Beach,” Dr. Kolomeyer went on. “They were really tough, not a good audience like you. They were poets. And the only thing they had in common was poetry. You’d make them feel inferior.”

He started talking about the history of poetry, poets as heroes, what it took to write the stuff — “an open, vacant mind” — before somebody yelled at him to can it and get on with the poetry. So he recited four he wrote.

The things residents revealed in art form, or free form, varied from descriptions of bleak existences and weaknesses, to hope and joy and love. About half sang.

A pressing police problem changes “almost all” of those arrested but there are “intervention” options for first-time felons, such as services and job training.

Incarceration is not a priority in prosecuting drug-dealing,” she said.

On the other hand, the threat of state prison for a second offense is a tool in the fight against drugs, she said, and the DA’s stay-away orders are “leverage” in the system, but “it’s a revolving door in a lot of respects.”

“I don’t want you to think that we don’t do anything,” Woo said. “The price of doing business in San Francisco has gone up in the last 2% years. Arrests on the street send a message. And San Francisco is turning the corner and is sending people to jail for parole violations.”

But serious quality-of-life issues, plus drug dealing, remain a daily disaster for part of the neighborhood. As soon as police cleared away messy encampments on Golden Gate Avenue in September, more appeared on Ellis between Jones and Taylor, in the block where Glide offers food and services.

RATS IN BOEDDEKER PARK
I’m not anti-homeless but we seem to have the worst of the worst,” said Kiell in an interview last month that included Presentation resident Dan Stein. “The police act very quickly, but then the problem is right back. There’s no place for them to go. And the situation is no one’s fault, not Glide’s, the mayor’s or the police. And I have no idea for a solution.”

Stein said the squatters on the sidewalk at Boeddeker Park’s closed north gate threw food into the park and climb over the fence at night to sleep there. Weeds have grown up. The park doesn’t get the gardening attention it got 18 months ago, he said. The result, he said, is rats. Presentation residents using the patio that abuts the park fence have spotted rats coming from the park to the patio fountain for water. Presentation has two traps set at the fence.

Stein was part of the collaboration with St. Anthony’s and Glide to put on ice cream socials for seniors at the park in 2004. But they were discontinued last year.

“We served hamburgers and it was overrun by street people, not the seniors it was intended for,” Stein said. “We lost control. The last thing we had in the park was the arts festival a year ago. People are afraid to go in there now.”

Labor Day weekend narcotics police used Presentation’s roof as a lookout. They radioed patrol cars and several arrests were made on Ellis Street.

The day desk clerk, Aaron Jones, a former Oakland schoolteacher, at the urging of property manager Roberta Goodman, said he wrote a poem about the Tenderloin. It was a dark account of its hard streets, despair and peril. Joe Shelton, a Vietnam veteran, stood up with his guitar and gave a James Taylor-like rendition of “Carry Me,” a song about being transported back to love and family, beauty and serenity. He followed it with the 1960s hit “Get Together,” and people hummed, sang and clapped as the familiar lyrics filled the room. “C'mon people, now smile on your brother, ev'rybody get together, try to love one another right now.”

From a front row seat, lanky Roni “Macaroni” Armbruster struggled to stand on legs that never got right after an accident years ago. He pushed his walker forward a few feet, turned and sat on the chair to tell a couple of stories. With his wispy, full gray beard, black and white plaid cap and drawl- ing country baritone, he was the epitome of an apple barrel raconteur. He knew just the right volume for the punch line in the story from his youth about God assigning longevity to the sex lives of his creatures.

Sonja Porter didn't have a song or poem. But the crowd called her up to do something, anything. The thin, diminutive black woman stood beaming in front of the crowd, held up her hands and wiggled her fingers and said, “I do love you all. I do love you all. I do love you all.”

The hour of talent was such a success that a second round of performing began. Ron Rucker came back to sing. “She’s a one-man woman (and that’s all she is).” Tita Knox belted “Mr. Telephone Man” this time. And Joe Shelton, having heard some improvised vaudeville act a few weeks earlier, started playing guitar and the effort petered out.

“Ninety percent of the residents here have had substance abuse problems and most are dually diagnosed,” he said. “And the Mission has had a significant role in helping develop the male residents here. Randy brought that development back here to the Empress to help create programs and services.”

ENCORES GALORE

After this success, Goodman said, there will be another Open Mic night, but no date was set.

Vietnam vet Joe Shelton stirred the crowd with nostalgic 1960s tunes, and had everybody humming.

Get Informed About Ranked-Choice Voting!

For the November 7, 2006 Election, San Francisco voters will use ranked-choice voting to elect the Assessor-Recorder and Public Defender.

San Francisco voters who live in Supervisorial Districts 2, 4, 6, 8 and 10 will also use ranked-choice voting to elect their Member of the Board of Supervisors.

With ranked-choice voting, the names of all the candidates are listed in three side-by-side columns on the ballot. This allows you to rank up to three candidates for the same office.

If there are fewer than three candidates, or to rank fewer than three candidates, you may leave any remaining columns blank.
